This publication is:

- for use by ReturnToWorkSA in assessing performance against some of the requirements of registration as a self-insured employer.
- a guide for use by ReturnToWorkSA Evaluators in assessing self-insured employer systems against the injury management standards (IM standards).
- a reference document for self-insured employers, or employers considering an application for registration as a self-insured employer and inform of what ReturnToWorkSA will ordinarily consider when assessing performance against the IM standards.
- not intended as a substitute for the requirements of the Return to Work Act 2014 (the Act) or the Code of conduct for self-insured employers (the Code).

Information produced by ReturnToWorkSA Corporation of South Australia in this publication is correct at the time of printing and is provided as general information only. In utilising general information about workplace health and safety and injury management, the specific issues relevant to your workplace should always be considered.

Introduction

Performance against the IM standards is one of the considerations ReturnToWorkSA has regard to when deciding whether to grant, renew, reduce or revoke a period of registration as a self-insured employer.

The primary objective of the IM standards is to provide a framework against which a self-insured employer's exercise of its delegated powers and discretions can be evaluated.

The IM standards focus on a self-insured employer's:

- maintenance of systems to ensure legal compliance.
- equitable management of claims for compensation and return to work activities.
- provision of effective early intervention and return to work processes.
- provision of quality services that optimise recovery and return to work.
- timely decision making on claims and the provisions of benefits and ensuring a high level of compliance with relevant legislative requirements.
- effective communication and consultative arrangements to support return to work outcomes and to minimise the number of applications for review.

ReturnToWorkSA will utilise the IM standards to protect the financial integrity of the scheme.

The IM standards follow similar design principles to that of a business management system.

A self-insured employer will (whilst maintaining legal compliance, administration of claims and management of recovery and return to work) need to:

- develop and implement policies, procedures, and other materials which direct achievement of obligations and responsibilities under the Act, the Code, and other relevant requirements.
- effectively implement claims and recovery and return to work processes and reasonably exercise the powers and discretions delegated under the Act.
- apply measurement, monitoring and review processes to its claims and recovery and return to work processes.

To be granted an initial registration, an employer must demonstrate readiness of systems and resources to meet the IM standards, including the development of policies and procedures that describe how these standards and other requirements of self-insurance are to be achieved. To obtain a maximum period of registration renewal, a self-insured employer must demonstrate to the satisfaction of ReturnToWorkSA, amongst other things, the requirements of the IM standards have been met.

This document provides ReturnToWorkSA and self-insured employers with guidance on the information and processes that would ordinarily be expected to be applied by a self-insured employer in the management of claims and recovery and return to work. Importantly, ReturnToWorkSA is not prescribing or mandating a particular way the self-insured employer meets these standards, but rather outlining what aspects ReturnToWorkSA will consider as part of its regulation of self-insured employers.

Scoping, sampling evaluation and reporting methodologies are detailed within the evaluation practice guideline available on ReturnToWorkSA's website.
